Time

Time is a repeater
As its waves lap the shore,
A destiny forgotten or lost,
Fighting the world, a quiet war.
Time is a weapon,
Used against the living,
It conquers youth and love,
It is a taking not a giving.
Time is an actor,
It plays a vital role,
It hides the unseen blemishes,
Maybe so, but not for the soul.

Principal's Message

The past year has seen many changes in education. These changes--the abolition of Grade 13 examinations, the consultative role of departmental inspectors, the establishment of County boards--have many rather profound implications for every school and every community. The one change in approach which has most inspired and re-vitalized educators is the attitude that we must educate students to learn for themselves.

Up to this time teachers have not only told students what to study, in what depth, and to what extent, but also attempted to influence what should have been independent thought processes along what was considered by them to be acceptable lines. The new departure has introduced unheard of flexibility in the nature and treatment of subject matter, and this flexibility will allow any teacher to pursue his subject in such a way as to enhance its educational value as he sees it.

However, in our enthusiasm to adopt techniques appropriate to this new approach we teachers may occasionally lose sight of the fact that all our efforts will be worthless unless our students also acquire a new attitude. In order to change this attitude we must inform the students of our objectives and work with them to break old habits and establish new ones.

Up to this time students have played a passive role in the educational process. This gave measurable results and was easy to cope with. The teachers could force-feed according to a stipulated diet and the students were content to absorb and regurgitate as little or as much as was forced upon them. The results could be tested and the efficacy of the instruction and administration, could be assessed. This passivity on the part of the students lulled educators into a sleep that lasted for generations.

All we have to do in order to realize the value of the general awakening created by this new approach is to observe students at the grade 4 and 5 level who are being exposed to these new techniques at a time when natural curiosity is at a high point and inhibition is at a low point. Their interest, enthusiasm, and active participation not only results in the acquisition of facts and the ability to solve problems, but instills a flexibility which will in later life enable them to adjust quickly to most situations in these days when constant and immediate adjustments are essential.

This does not mean that it is too late for high school students, who have not been exposed to this type of challenge. However, it should be pointed out that it may be the last chance for some to develop this new attitude.

Students have in the past actually been discouraged from depth enquiry either because the teacher felt that the demands of the course prohibited the use of the time for investigation, or because the students themselves felt it would mean more material to memorize and be tested on. Further, students have heretofore seen teachers as task-masters driving them onward and, hopefully, upward. To counter years of this type of negative thinking students must be encouraged to enquire in depth in all areas and they must learn to view teachers as partners in education, working alongside them, encouraging natural curiosity, and participating in the satisfaction of investigation.

In short, the time has come when students must re-examine their role in the educative process and determine to help their teachers to give them full return for their time invested in formal schooling so that they will be adequately prepared for the serious business of living.

Vice-Principal's Message

Mr. E. S. Bryan B.A.

It is pleasant, to be given, in a book which so many Graduates and their friends will treasure all their lives, some space in which to say a few words of greeting.

All classes will remember the year 1967-1968 as a year of new beginnings. It has been a difficult as well as rewarding year. With a new building going up around us, we have had to put up with many inconveniences in the form of noises, dirt and room displacement. Now that this is almost at an end, we all can see the reward of our patience... I would compliment all of you on your deportment through the trying months behind. Personally I have found it a real pleasure to share these hardships with you.

Traditions change! You have a new school name! Some of you have found this hard to accept. You have a new administration and corresponding by new school policies: some of you have found these hard to accept as well... However, from the ashes of the past I have noted the growing pride of the students in the school, and an uprise in academic achievement.

I wish for each of our Graduates good fortune in your individual undertakings. May your memories of Belle River High School be warm.

Co - Editors Message

This year we are witnessing the moulding of a new school and a new active school spirit. Therefore it is only fitting that the theme of this yearbook be 'Tempo 68'. It is a rare opportunity to be so much a part of the origins of a great institution, which someday, we feel, this school will become. Its construction and new beginnings have certainly been a strain on all of us, but if we all pull together the future can only be bright.

To all those who have contributed even the smallest bit of advice or encouragement we extend a sincere "Thank you". And to our staff advisors, Mr. Terry and Mr. Hunter, we are deeply grateful for their time and interest. Without you, the compiling of this yearbook would not have been possible.

As we look back on the time and energy we have spent on this yearbook and then see the result of all our efforts, we realize the meaning of accepting a challenge and fulfilling it. We only hope that future editors find the same feeling of satisfaction as we have found in achieving such a goal.

In closing, we now extend our congratulations to the graduating class of 1968 and wish them happiness and self-fulfilment in their future careers.

Sincerely,

JoAnne Bearhope & John Campeau

Guidance Message

The Guidance Services Department of any high school should provide a valuable assistance to the administration in organizing harmonious co-operation within the various high school departments. Here, at Belle River High School, the Guidance Department has attempted to achieve this goal.

The Guidance Department is a comparative newcomer to the scene of education; nevertheless, the guidance counsellor has already begun to provide a major contribution to the lives of many high school students. The guidance counsellor performs a great variety of services to students-- making referrals, writing recommendations, providing materials for career planning, interpreting ideas and changing and presenting new material and new concepts that will enable them to discover and develop new skills.

This year the guidance department also attempted to improve the communication of up-to-date and accurate information to the students. This was achieved in several ways: (1) The Guidance Newsletter announced new changes and developments in the world of education, business, and the Department of Education. (2) Films and special speakers were arranged periodically during the year to provide more specialized information in the fields of education and business. Numerous bulletin board displays illustrated occupational families and tabulated university admission requirements for certain professions.

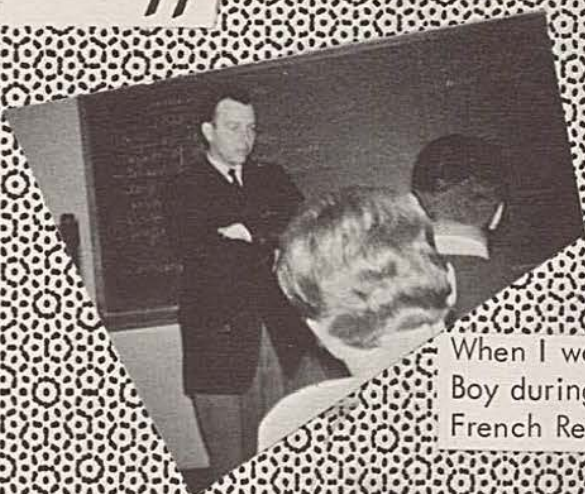

Without a doubt, the most characteristic feature of the Guidance Department is the individual guidance counselling service. Through individual appointments, the counsellor has an opportunity to advise, direct and encourage each student in the understanding and solution of his problems.

GRADUATES

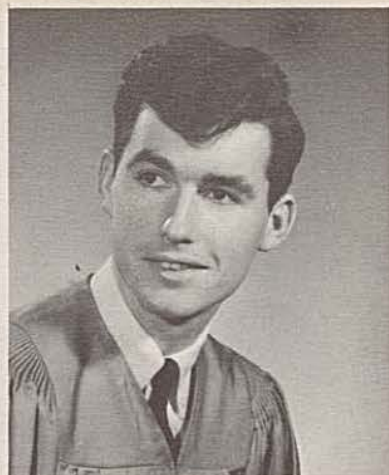

THE VOICE OF 1967-1968 GRADUATES

We the Graduates wish to voice a sincere belief which is shared by each individual represented here. Through the course of the years we have had countless opportunity to express and share our individual opinions. We have found that at the close of each day we have become a little more a part of each other. As Graduates we have shared many joyous times together and each of us has marvelled at the unity of spirit that we have claimed. As individuals we have all learned the major purpose for our being together. We have discovered, among ourselves, that we have been brought together to learn from each other and together we have found that it is not the materialistic display of 'marks' that assess our newly acquired knowledge; the bulk of it lasting for only a temporary time period. But it is our ambitious attitude by which we accept the wisdom that teachers, books and pure experience offer us.

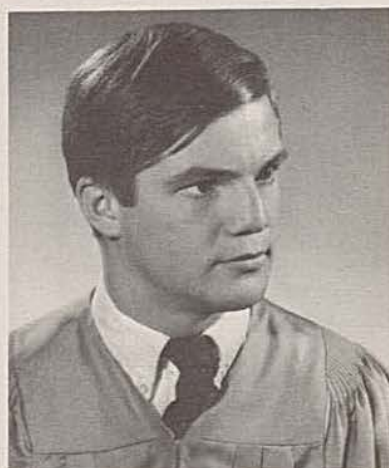

Solomon was considered to be one of the wisest men that ever lived. God promised to grant to him anything that he desired and Solomon chose wisdom. After many years he penned these words, "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom and getteth understanding. They are more precious than rubies: and all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared unto them. Their ways are ways of pleasantness and all their paths are peace."

There is certainly a Solomon like attitude in our midst which we are sure will still be flourishing within each of us after many years of separation.

These little things that seem so huge before the clouds of confusion that shroud your mind are really nothing, trivial little perspective points that small human minds choose to play on and abuse. Human frailties tend to be a mustard seed which multiplies itself into a field of problems.

LA NEIGE

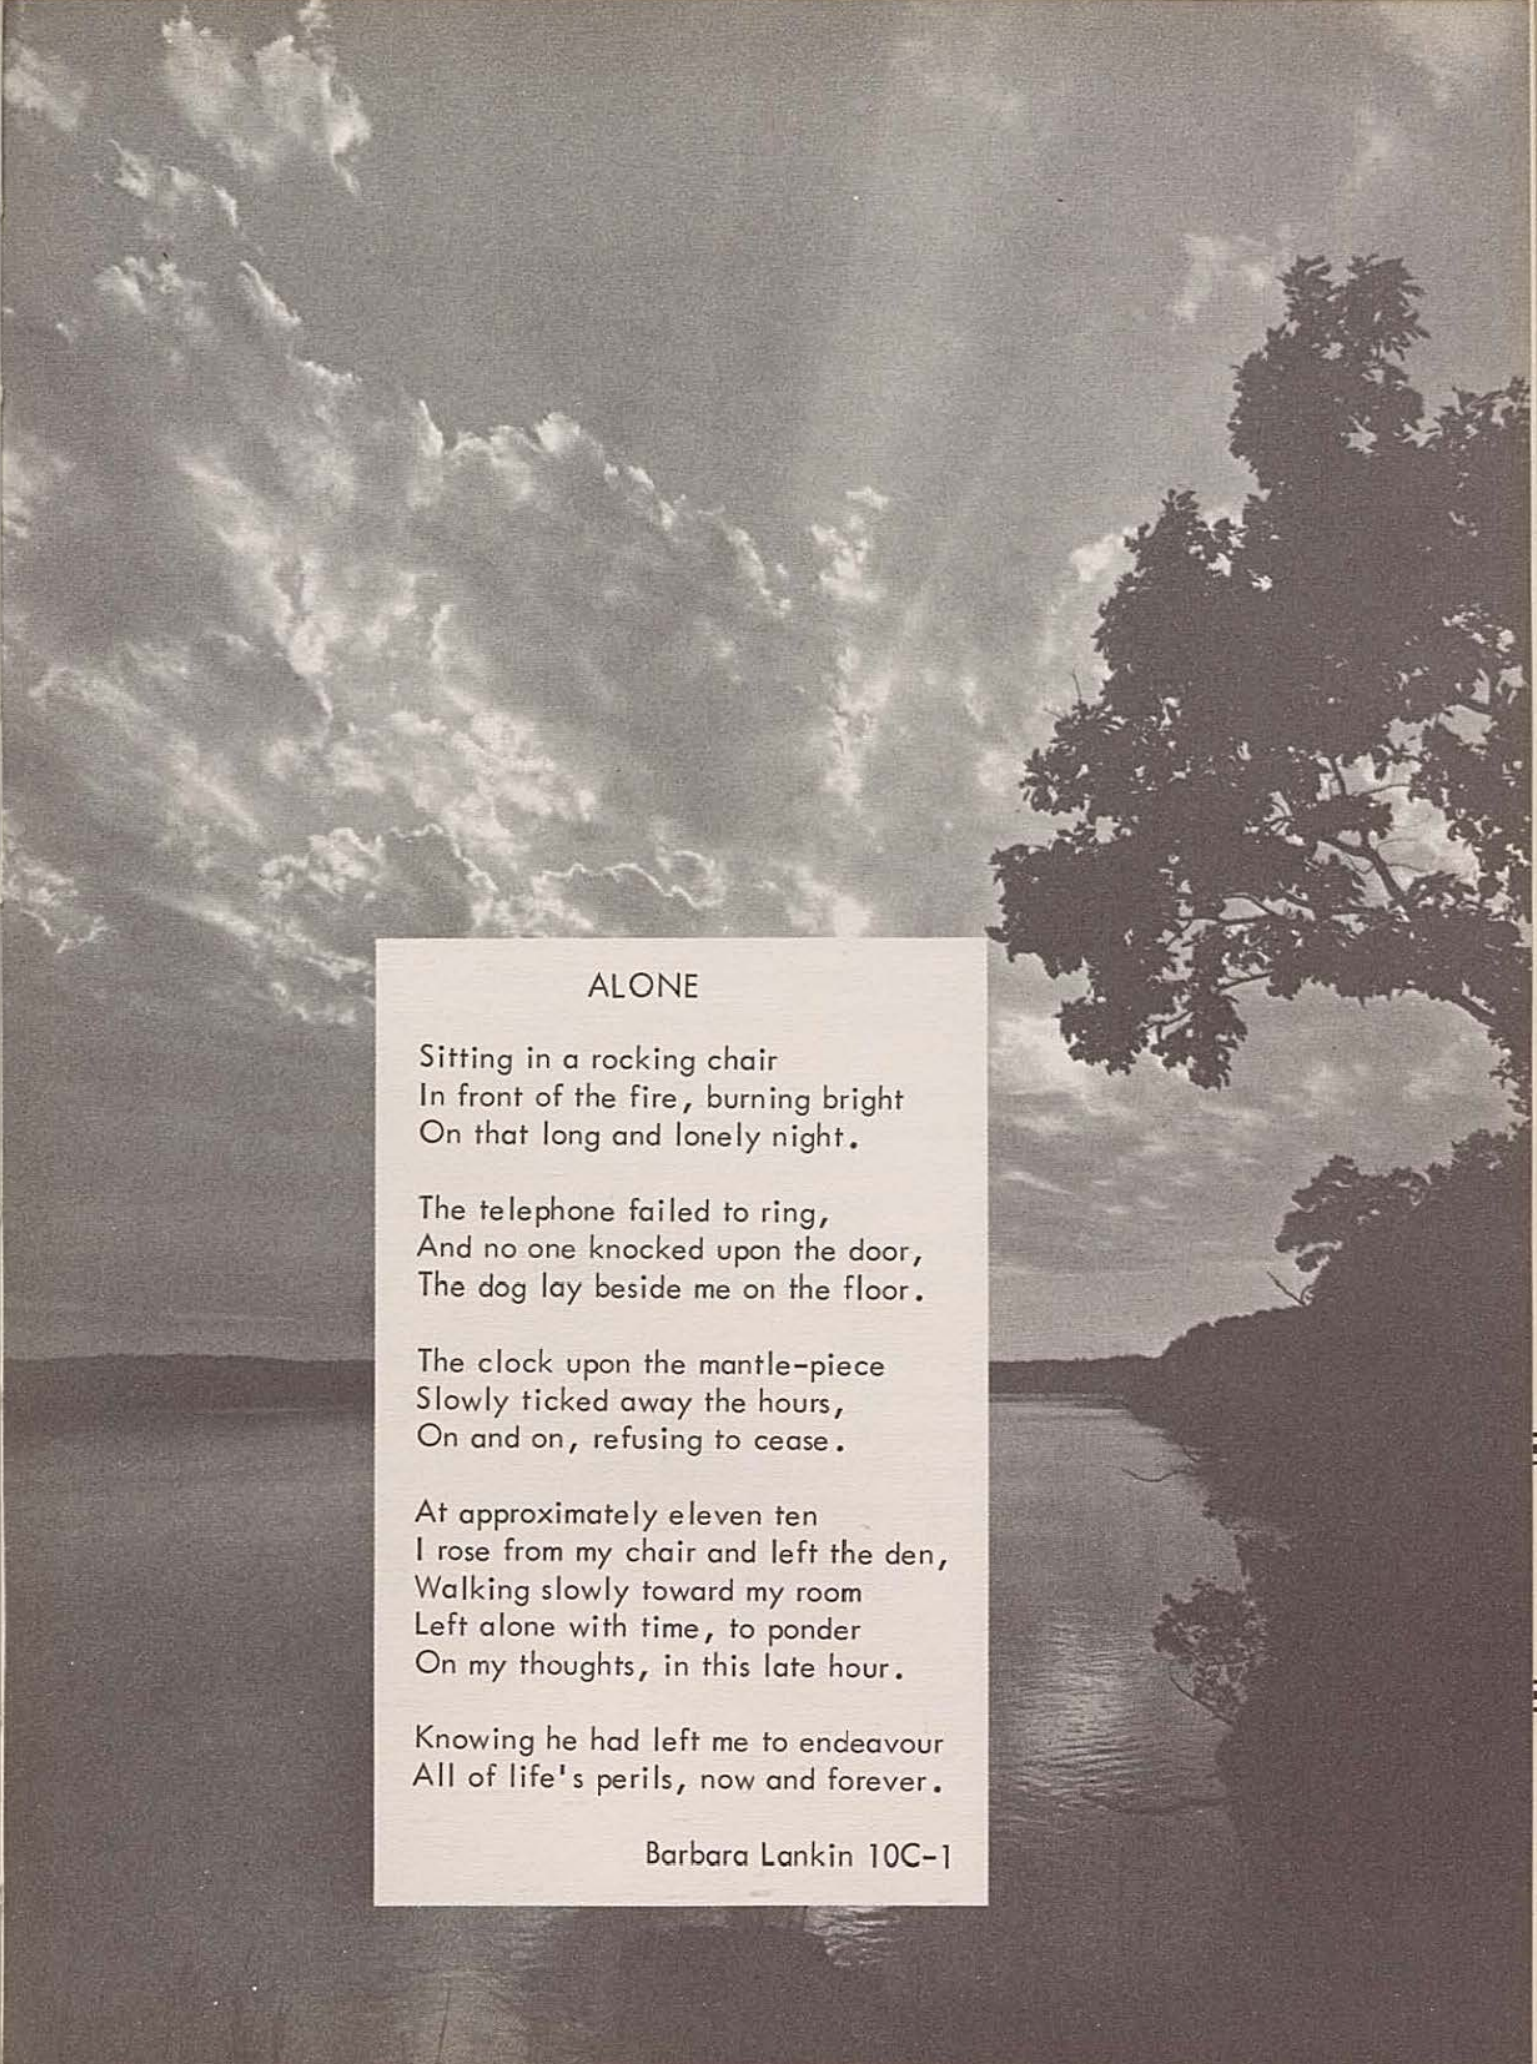

J'aime la neige,
Oh, comme elle tombe!
Elle est si belle,
Oh, comme elle inspire!

Sur les arbres et les rues,
La neige tombe,
C'est la plus blanche de tous,
Comme elle couvre le monde.

Elle n'a dit,
Le monde n'est pas mauvais,
Nous avons la nature
Un cadeau, si parfait!

Soyez heureuse,
Et soyez fier surtout.
Ne soyez pas triste.
Car la beauté est partout.

ALONE

Sitting in a rocking chair
In front of the fire, burning bright
On that long and lonely night.

The telephone failed to ring,
And no one knocked upon the door,
The dog lay beside me on the floor.

The clock upon the mantle-piece
Slowly ticked away the hours,
On and on, refusing to cease.

At approximately eleven ten
I rose from my chair and left the den,
Walking slowly toward my room
Left alone with time, to ponder
On my thoughts, in this late hour.

Knowing he had left me to endeavour
All of life's perils, now and forever.

MONDAY MORNING

There I was sitting in biology class, Monday morning, off in a daze. The professor was crouched over his desk in front of the class preparing an experiment while the rest of the class was busy writing their test on the theory of evolution. But I was just sitting there, breathing slowly, almost asleep staring out of the window at a sparrow building its nest.

Before we had started to study evolution three weeks ago, I was already convinced in my mind that 'everything' could not have happened any other way. The story about God creating man, that I had heard in Sunday School didn't interest me at all; that was for little kids and old fogies. At least that is what I thought until last week. It was something the professor had said that got me thinking. I had always thought that all scientists were atheists until Mr. Bernstein, my professor, told us something that shocked me clean off my chair.

"The more and more I study in this field of science," he said, "the more I am convinced that the world could never have happened by chance, but that it had to have been planned carefully by an intelligence so great that all the minds of the world combined would fall short."

Then he went on to tell us of the accurate details so prevalent in nature. Things like the perfect symmetry of the universe down to the minute perfection of a single atom.

"The intricate design of nature is so symmetrical, so utterly flawless and yet so beautiful that there must have been a designer."

He drew a comparison to the very building we were occupying. He explained that before the school was built it was a crude pile of steel and bricks, but in order for it to have become a building it couldn't just all at once flop together into proper place, but it first had to be planned carefully by a skilled architect in order to suit its purpose.

"As we have seen in the past few weeks, the theory of evolution teaches that all this just didn't happen by chance - something I can never accept, it is much easier to believe in an intelligent creator than in a haphazard creation."

Then he said that any person who believed that he evolved from two nothings that had come together to form a something had to have more faith to believe in that than in a Divine Creator.

Well I tell you by now practically everyone's lower lip had dropped clear to their knees. The whole class was shocked as a father with triplets.

And now as I sit here I wonder about it all; maybe everyone didn't agree with him, but he sure got a lot of people thinking.

NATHAN PILGRIM

Nathan Pilgrim is one of the many thousand negroes who are the unhappy results of illiteracy and poverty and have been rejected by a white American society. He has a third grade education and a part-time job with which to support his wife and six children. He works as a ditch digger, which besides being very strenuous work, his job only pays three or four dollars a day. This gives him an annual income of about six hundred dollars. He is only an example of the many other families in the Mississippi delta area that are forced to live in such conditions.

Today this is one of the areas where the American government is waging its war on poverty.

We hear very little of this 'War on Poverty' except when it is brought to the public's attention. We here in the north, know very little of starvation or how it feels, but for the Pilgrim family it is a daily occurrence. They have never had a proper, nutritious meal. Their entire food supply may consist of a quarter jar of coffee, some jam, and a half bag of rice. With such a poor diet, Nathan's children could develop serious brain and organ deformities and other physical damages. This would bring about another generation of handicapped people who would also be illiterate because Nathan's children do not go to school. The reasons being that Nathan does not have the means to support them and in his words "They can't l'arn nothin' anyhow".

He and his family live in a two room shack on a street without a name, in a house without a number, without water, sanitary facilities or utilities. The furniture consists of two multi year old double beds on which they all sleep. Since the windows and roof are patched up with cardboard to keep the wind and rain out, the holes in the floor provide the only ventilation and a ready opening for rats to get in.

There are thousands of families who are living in stark, crowded quarters without sufficient food. This particular area depends almost completely on help from the government but the amount of help necessary is not forthcoming because of the opposition of a few senators. The miles and miles of red tape are being slowed down to a point where citizens are actually dying of starvation in the bountiful United States.

What can be done about Nathan Pilgrim, his family and the many others who are living in such wretched conditions? How can we prevent this from happening?

The answer is up to us! What will we do?

HUMOUR

The battle of the sexes will never be won by either sides; there is too much fraternizing with the enemy.

Holding public office is like trying to dance in a nightclub. No matter what you do, you rub somebody the wrong way.

You know we have a strange and wonderful relationship....you're strange and I'm wonderful.

Man to Man "She hasn't got much upstairs- but what a stairway!"

Courtship is the period during which the girl decides whether or not she can do any better.

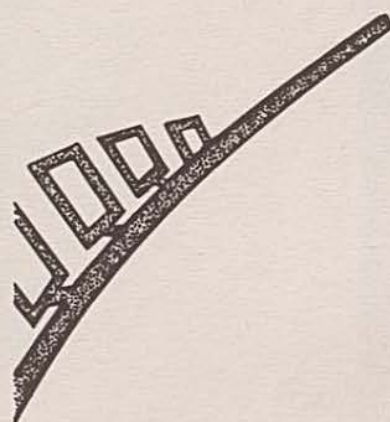

Did you hear about the beatnik who walked into the grocery store with a banana skin and said, "Like, man, I want a refill."

Hear about the new dog food called "Arf"... so dogs can ask for it by name.

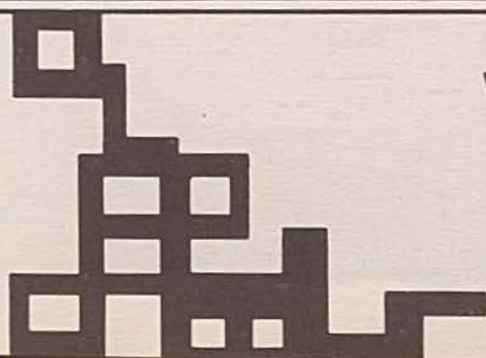

Hear about the 4-way cold capsule that had a nervous breakdown?
He couldn't decide which way to go.

"I'm NOT CALLING TO REPORT A BURGLARY! THIS IS THE BURGLAR!"

1967-1968

With the reception tonight of these diplomas, we have formally reached another milestone on the road of life. Actually it was reached last June, but none of us stopped there. We all continued on, even if the paths have diverged. Some have chosen a career while the rest have continued with their education. But, despite these differences, we all share tonight a common sense of pride and feeling of accomplishment for a job well done. The goal that seemed so distant and insurmountable five years ago, we have now reached. Now it is time to set our sights on even greater goals.

Since we left Belle River last June, many changes have taken place - in both the staff and the building. But even before this, major changes had taken place. These have always occurred, but they were not always observed for they were character changes not physical. Over the years that we spent here, they showed themselves in many different ways. These changes were simply by-products of our education. For with education came responsibilities, criticisms and setbacks; all of which we had to learn to cope with. In this period of turmoil, we were never alone with these difficulties for the same teachers that taught us also were there to assist us when we faltered on the road of life. Though this assistance may not have been appreciated at the time; on looking back we see that in many cases, their advice was logical or sufficient so that we could follow the problem through to its conclusion. They also gave unselfishly of their time and energy to make sure that we understood the work. Often, they had to go over the same lesson 2 or 3 times and in one case we must have done each and every lesson at least 15 times. Irritating as these repetitions were to us at the time, we can now see that it was for our benefit and appreciate it. For all this, we thank our many teachers.

Now, having gained knowledge and experience here, we are ready to go out into the world. But there is one more important consideration that we should have learned by now. This is a proper attitude. To explain this idea, I will use the following example as it is a difficult idea to put into words. One afternoon, on the street of a small town, a clergyman was approached by a man who asked him, "I'm new in town and I was wondering if you could tell me what people are like here?" The clergyman replied, "What were the people like in the town you used to live in?" "Well, they were unfriendly and uncooperative. They never tried to get along and I just didn't like them at all." "I think," replied the priest, "that you will find that the people here are just the same." Later, the same clergyman was approached by another man who posed the same question. "I'm new in town and I was wondering if you could tell me what the people are like here." Again he asked, "What were the people like in the town where you used to live?" The man replied, "They were wonderful people. They were kind and friendly and we all enjoyed helping each other and being together." The minister replied, "I think that you will find that the people here are just the same." With the proper attitude to life many new horizons are opened up.

Valedictory

Address

We are now ready to take our place in the world - and a major place it is. We must be part of the generation that will steady and pull back from the brink a world that is now teetering on the edge of self-destruction. It's not an easy assignment, but it can be done; it must be, otherwise there will be no organized graduating class in 1990. On behalf of the graduating class of 67-68, I would like to offer our thanks to all those who have helped, guided and watched as we struggled to where we stand now. We hope that we have lived up to your expectations for us and that in the days to come, as we pursue our own endeavours, you will become even more proud of us.

DISCOURS D'ADIEU

Ce soir, au nom des gradués, j'ai l'honneur d'exprimer leurs sentiments de joie et aussi de peine à cette occasion.

C'est en recevant ce certificat que nous nous rappelons des plus belles années de notre jeunesse. Maints souvenirs surgissent à l'esprit; souvenirs de joie et de peine: la joie d'amitiés profondes, de jeux, de soirées récréatives; l'angoisse lors de nos devoirs, lors des examens! Ces expériences nous ont fourni les outils dont nous devons nous servir dans la vie nouvelle qui se présente.

Je profite de cette occasion pour remercier ceux qui nous ont aidés pendant ces années difficiles: notre principal, nos professeurs et nos parents. Sans votre encouragement nous ne serions pas ici ce soir, vêtus de nos robes de gradués.

Lorsque nous étions petits enfants on nous demandait: "Que seras-tu quand tu grandiras?" Cette question avait alors peu d'importance. En effet, notre réponse à cette question a peut-être souvent changé. Maintenant que nous sommes gradués, nous laissons nos camarades de classe afin d'accomplir la réponse définitive à cette question - c'est-à-dire, la profession que nous avons choisie. Parmi nous sont les futurs professeurs, gardemalades, médecins, secrétaires et les pères et mères de famille.

Nous voici à la première page d'un nouveau chapitre de notre vie, le début d'une période dans laquelle une plus grande maturité sera exigée de nous. Nous ne devons pas demeurer inactifs à ce point, mais nous devons avancer, fixant nos yeux et nos coeurs sur le plus haut but que nous sommes capables d'atteindre et nous devons nous enjoinde à travailler déligemment à réaliser nos objectifs.

C'est à ce moment que nous les gradués, nous devons dire "Adieu". Adieu charmante école, adieu chers amis de classe, adieu beaux jours inoubliables. Nous ne vous oublierons jamais!

Our foster children live in a home nestled in the foothills of the Himalayas. Here the children are of different religious sects but they live here as members of the same family. They all have a common goal to bring about a total regeneration of their country and in this way prove themselves worthy of her honour.

The home, playground and the school are the places which provide a wealth of experience to enable them to prepare themselves for the reconstruction of a new and prosperous India.

The rivers, the hills and the dales of India are all very dear to these young people they know that they are a little better off than many and the recognition of this fact causes them to want to do something for those less fortunate than they. Aren't you glad your doing a little something for them?

Trip To Quebec

Train ride home from Quebec

In these two pages we would like to share with you some of the good times we experienced on our trip to Quebec. This was the first of such trips offered to our school and thirteen French students had the opportunity to observe the French Canadian way of life. The first night was spent in Montreal at the Sheraton Laurentian Hotel. The next day we were off to Quebec city and there we stayed at the Universal Motel. Entertainment was provided nightly by a local London band, "The Spere". Most of the time we were free to go skiing and skating or shopping in the little boutiques. We also learned that the French Canadian people were the warmest, friendliest people that could ever be found. I urge all to visit Quebec and experience this most heart warming hospitality that French Canada has to offer.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Gratitude—such a small word possessing so much meaning. I wish to express the deepest gratitude to all of those who helped to make this year such a wonderful, rewarding one for all of us. Thank you, especially Grant, Mary Ann, Bruce and Sharon for all the effort and time you have contributed. Also, to Mr. Bezaire, Mr. Bryan, Mr. Taylor and to you, the Students of Belle River High for such warm enthusiasm and support to your Student Council and to its activities.

A school is merely a building, until the spirit of the students within, give it a heart and character. Belle River High School has accomplished this and it is for this reason that I am so very proud to have been chosen by you for such an honoured position and sincerely hope I have served you well.

Thank you!

Faithfully yours,
Linda Beckett.

TO THE RAIN

You my friend,
By the Almighty One,
Have been chosen, to cleanse,
Chosen to come.
To recover love,
To find hope, not pride.
Your intentions my friend,
Must not hide.
You a virgin,
Of precious grace,
Left a tear drop,
On a petal's face.
You a Kiss,
Of love so true,
Visits, then leaves us,
A forgiving dew.
You so tiny,
Chosen by He,
Can dust this soul,
And set us free.
